

4 Resources For Battle Rappers By Music Industry

How To

4 Resources For Battle Rappers By Music Industry How To

Hi there, Shaun Letang from Music Industry How To here. Today I'm going to share with you 4 resources all battle rappers should have in place. While this is by no means a complete or extensive list, all of the bellow are important and should be looked into sooner rather than later.

Please note that you can get more great guides and resources like this (but more detailed) by signing up to the Music Industry How To newsletter. So do that now. :)

4 Resources For Battle Rappers

1. Youtube For Research

While simple, Youtube is one of the biggest resources you have at your disposable as a battle rapper. As battle rap is largely based on what you know about your opponent, doing research on them and digging up dirt is an important part of preparing for any battle.

While you may get lucky and already know personal things about them through first hand experience, this often won't be the case, especially as a new rapper. So use Youtube to instead look for times where they've done things you can pick up on. When you're starting out, it can also be used to get inspiration from other battle rappers.

2. A Rhyming Dictionary

A rhyming dictionary is a tool that can help you go from average lyrics that everyone else has, to creating lyrics that are largely unique and structured different from most other rapper's. While there are many around, I personally like Rhyme Zone. Here you can find words to rhyme with existing words easily.

3. Time To Prepare

Good battle rap lyrics can't be rushed. If you try to prepare, write all your lyrics and remember them a week or so before a battle, you're asking to mess up. This will lead to lyrics not being in your head properly and you forgetting them. You also don't get enough time to change things up as needed and make everything sound natural in your delivery.

4. Friends For Confidence And Image

To some, battle rapping can be intimidating. Especially when your opponent tries to intimidate you with their movements. While it's usually all part of the act, if you crumble and look scared, this footage will be used against you in many future battles to come.

If though you have your friends behind you, you're less likely to be intimidated as you know you've got people there that have your best interests at heart. Battle rap is all for show, so having your friends there as well will help you portray a stronger image.

There you have it, four resources all battle rappers should have. You can see more advice for musicians like this over at Music Industry How To. You should:

Register to get free guides sent to your email inbox.

Also Read:

How To Battle Rap For Beginners

How To Freestyle Rap In Battles And Win

How To Write Battle Rap Lyrics, Pro Tips For Serious Rappers!

Shaun Letang,
Music Industry How To.